21 AUG – 26 AUG 2017

- Gold rose for a second day on Thursday after Federal Reserve officials hinted that U.S. interest rates could rise more slowly than expected, while palladium was lifted to a fresh 16-year high by strong industrial metals markets. A cautious Dallas Fed President Robert Kaplan said on Thursday he would need to see evidence that prices will rise to a 2-percent target in the medium term to support another interest-rate hike. Meanwhile, Kaplan's Minneapolis counterpart Neel Kashkari said he continues to see no urgency to raise interest rates.
- Oil prices rose on Thursday as renewed attention was put on U.S. oil stockpile declines after an industry report suggested oil inventories at the Cushing, Oklahoma hub were declining. Inventories at Cushing, the delivery hub for U.S. crude futures, declined more than a million barrels in the week to Aug. 15, traders said citing estimates from energy industry information provider Genscape. In the latest week to Aug. 11 for which government data was available, Cushing inventories increased nearly 700,000 barrels. Inventories in the United States are closely watched as the market grapples with a global supply glut.
- Aluminium, copper and other base metals edged down from multiyear peaks on Thursday as some investors locked in profits from a steep rally amid doubts about future demand in top metals consumer China. Speculators have largely fuelled a rally on the London Metal Exchange that has seen the index of six LME industrial metals climb 16 percent from early June to Wednesday's close. Also weighing on metals markets as well as European shares on Thursday were minutes from the U.S. Federal Reserve, released on Wednesday evening, in which policymakers voiced concern over weak U.S. inflation, clouding the outlook for the world's largest economy.

INTERNATIONAL AND COMEX NEWS

- spot gold prices rose by 0.4 percent to close at $1287.6 per ounce after Federal Reserve officials hinted that U.S. interest rates could rise more slowly than expected. A cautious Dallas Fed President Robert Kaplan said on Thursday he would need to see evidence that prices will rise to a 2-percent target in the medium term to support another interest-rate hike. The minutes of the Fed's July 25-26 policy meeting showed some policymakers wished to halt further rate increases until it is clear the trend of soft inflation is transitory.
- WTI oil prices rose by 0.7 percent on Thursday to close at $47.1 per barrel as renewed attention was put on U.S. oil stockpile declines after an industry report suggested oil inventories at the Cushing, Oklahoma hub were declining. Inventories at Cushing, the delivery hub for U.S. crude futures, declined more than a million barrels in the week to Aug. 15, estimates from energy industry information provider Genscape said. In the latest week to Aug. 11, Cushing inventories increased nearly 700,000 barrels.
- LME Copper prices fell by 0.6 percent to close at $6490/t from the highest levels since December 2014 as investors booked profits after a broad based rally in the metals space. However, sharp downside was restricted as decline in LME stocks along with a weaker DX acted as supportive factors. In the latest FOMC meeting minutes, members expressed concern over weaker inflation, thereby hurting US economic outlook. Earlier this week, Copper prices rose to multi-year highs after hike in Steel trading fees on the Shanghai Futures Exchange led investors to divert their funds to other base metals.
