- Gold fell to a three-week low on Thursday, weighed down by a stronger dollar as investors began to assess the potential for another U.S. rate hike later in the year, supported by data showing a strong U.S. jobs market. The losses in gold were limited, however, with bullion underpinned by myriad global uncertainties, including a report that U.S. President Donald Trump was under investigation. The U.S. Federal Reserve raised interest rates by a notch as expected on Wednesday and indicated further tightening before the end of the year. U.S. data on Thursday bolstered the case for higher rates, as the number of Americans filing for unemployment benefits fell more than expected last week.
- Crude Oil prices settled lower for a second straight day on Thursday, as the market was unable to rebound from Wednesday's decline on the back of a surprise build in U.S. gasoline inventories and ongoing worries about heavy global supply. Oil has slumped despite output cuts of 1.8 million barrels a day by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and non-OPEC producers including Russia. On May 25, the countries said they agreed to extend the cuts nine months through next March. Yet crude prices have slid about 12 percent since that day as other countries have boosted output. Saudi Arabia's oil exports are expected to fall below 7 million barrels per day this summer, according to industry sources familiar with the matter, and Russian oil exports were seen as broadly flat in the third quarter.
- Copper fell for a fourth day on Thursday after the Federal Reserve lifted U.S. interest rates and took a more hawkish than expected stance on future policy, boosting the dollar and weighing on assets priced in the U.S. currency. The dollar strengthened as expectations for another U.S. rate increase this year were kept alive by a policy statement that indicated huge emergency funds pumped into the economy since 2009 could be trimmed. Below-forecast U.S. inflation and retail sales data on Wednesday, coming hot on the heels of reports showing Chinese growth could lose momentum, had already reinforced concerns about the outlook for raw materials demand.

INTERNATIONAL AND COMEX NEWS

- European markets are trading higher today ahead of the much awaited FOMC statement. Asian markets are trading mixed and the US stocks futures are trading in the green.
- Gold prices are trading lower today by 0.2 percent at $1258 per ounce while MCX gold prices are trading lower by 0.82 percent at Rs.28793 per 10 gms. Risk sentiment was hit after Washington Post reported that Trump is being investigated by special counsel Robert Mueller for possible obstruction of justice.
- LME Copper prices are trading lower by 0.41 percent at $5675/t while MCX copper prices are trading higher by half a percent at Rs.365.90 per kg. Chinese industrial production and retail sales stayed put at 6.5 and 10.7 percent respectively in May'17 while decline in LME stocks in the recent weeks is supporting the metal.
- WTI oil prices are trading lower today by 0.36 percent at $44.57 per barrel while MCX oil prices are trading marginally higher by 0.1 percent at Rs.2876 per barrel. Oil prices dropped to six-week lows on Thursday, under pressure from high global inventories and doubts about OPEC's ability to implement agreed production cuts.
- FED has finally raised hike for the second time this year and one more rate hike remains on the card. Gold prices will correct further in the months ahead with this move. Increasing rig counts in the US is sign that oil markets will be oversupplied in the months ahead exerting downside pressure on oil prices. We expect oil prices to trade lower today. Inventory overhang in the US will also be a negative factor for oil. Supply disruptions in Chile will continue to act as a positive factor for copper prices while good economic data from China will further boost the base metals pack.
